

TRUONG PHI HUNG

Dr. Truong Phi Hung received his medical degree from the University of Medicine and Pharmacy, Ho Chi Minh City, Viet Nam (UMP) in 2001. He completed residency training in Internal Medicine at UMP-Ho Chi Minh City, with specialist at Cardiology in 2005. He received PhD degree of cardiology at the University of Medicine and Pharmacy, Viet Nam in 2020. He is currently Head of Module of Cardiovascular disease second year, Lecturer and Clinical Instructor at Internal Medicine Department of UMP and Interventionist and cardiologist at Heart Center at Cho Ray Hospital.

Dr. Truong's major is treatment of patients with heart diseases such as hypertension, acute coronary syndrome, rheumatic heart valves diseases, heart failure and focuses mainly on the field of Interventional Cardiology. He is responsible for the treatment of several hundred patients per year, mainly heart disease patients in Department of Interventional Cardiology, Cho Ray Hospital-Ho Chi Minh city, the biggest hospital in the South of Vietnam.

Dr. Truong currently teaches undergraduate and graduate students of UMP, fellows and practicing physicians in Cardiology and Interventional Cardiology in Cho Ray Hospital.